Chicago Chapter News
The recorder society enjoyed a rollicking good meeting Sunday September 18. Eight members of the Oak Park Recorder Society presented a varied program that concentrated on composers between 1500 and 1650. Included were works by Tallis, Compere, Morley and Wilbye. Nancy Chabala had prepared music for the member playing session for both inexperienced and accomplished players. Refreshments were contributed by Ann Greene and Arlene Ghiron, as part of the move this year to ask members to sign up to bring food for after our playing sessions.

The October 16 meeting features American Recorder Society President Lisette Kielson directing the playing session, as part of the ARS annual member’s meeting. Some members of the National Board will be present as part of their efforts to visit local chapters. Chicago Chapter members should make a special effort to attend this meeting. In view of the expected increased attendance, everyone coming should bring a small contribution to the refreshments.—Arlene Ghiron

West Suburban Early Music Society
Our first WSEMS meeting of the season opened with an excellent performance by Jim Heup and Ed Green of an anonymous two part estampie from the 14th century entitled Petrone. Inspired, we began our regular meeting under by singing Early One Morning. Laura pointed out that when we were singing, we moved together, breathed together and ended together. Now we have no excuse not to do that while playing recorders! We played through a variety of pieces during the meeting. We discussed and emphasized the two vs. three distinction in Holborne galliards As it fell on a holie eve and Heigh ho holiday. We were fortunate to have enough people to play through a double choir song Un jour l’amant et l’amie by Orlando di Lasso. Our next meeting will be at October 9 at 2 pm at the Naperville Covenant Church. Hope to see everyone there.—Eric Stern

ARS Board Meeting, Denver
The board of the American Recorder Society met in Denver September 15-18, hosted by Regis University and by members of the Denver chapter. We talked at length about future plans for the ARS Festival in July of 2012, fund raising efforts, and steps to take to improve the Society’s financial situation. Once again I was most impressed by the skill and heart of my colleagues on the board. What I enjoy most from these meetings is the opportunities to talk to fellow board members at length and to meet and talk with local chapter members.

Friday night we joined Colorado recorder players for a town hall meeting, pot luck dinner, and playing session. The Stop Time band offered dinner entertainment. The members are all part of the Denver chapter; guitar, drums and vocals join recorders (with microphones attached) to play jazz and ragtime tunes.

Lisette directs ARS Board members & the Denver chapter
Mark Davenport, board member and Associate Professor of Music at Regis University, gave the board a tour of the Recorder Music Center, an archive documents the history of recorder music in America in the 20th century. The Regis library features an open stack collection of some 1500 scores of recorder music, a display case of historic instruments, and a complete set of bound copies of the American Recorder magazine from 1960 to the present. The archives of the American Recorder Society and of several prominent recorder players and teachers are also in the Regis Library, with a wide array of historic photos, correspondence, and chapter records. Mark noted that besides the 1500 cataloged music scores the Recorder Music Center has inventoried another 10,000 scores waiting to be cataloged, and 18,000 more in boxes, yet to be inventoried. They catalog about 40 scores per month ($22 to bind and catalog each score) but hope to find funding to hire more staff to speed this process.

If you have some historical materials of your own related to the history of recorder playing in America, items that you would like to see conserved for the future, such as publications, photos, correspondence, and instruments, you might want to consider donating them to the Recorder Music Center at Regis University.

At the library I looked at some early copies of American Recorder. In the Spring 1960 issue, the Chicago chapter announced the first release of this newsletter, the Recorder Reporter. Winter 1961 describes how the Chicago chapter had set a new meeting time on Sunday afternoons and chose a new meeting place so that they had enough room for three different groups to gather at once, likely beginner, intermediate, and advanced. The leaders introduced a coffee break to give the chapter’s “rather large membership a much-needed opportunity to get acquainted with each other.” Members were encouraged to come early to jam, and to boost attendance, the chapter also arranged for rides on Sunday afternoons. Recorder players who, presumably, did not have cars 50 years ago were invited to phone (but not email) Transportation Chairman Earl Manning. I wonder how many chapter members rode their bikes to those meetings.

Laura Osterlund, Local Recorder Hero

Laura Osterlund, a former student of Mary Anne Gardner, grew up in Oak Park and played and performed regularly with the Chicago chapter through high school. Laura offered her final recital at McGill University in Montreal on September 9. She graduates with a Bachelor of Music Performance in June of 2012.

The recital featured mostly 15th & 16th century works by Pierre Attaingnant, Dario Castello, Johannes Prioris, Adrian Willaert and Conrad Pauman. Joining Laura were fellow students Jonathan Addleman on harpsichord, Esteban La Rotta on lute, and Alexa Raine-Wright on recorder. Jeremy VanSlyke served as Laura’s sound engineer, and recorded the recital for free (www.jeremyvanslyke.com).

Laura plans to apply to the Master’s degree program in medieval and renaissance performance at the Schola Cantorum Basiliensis in Basel, Switzerland. “I look forward to continued immersion in the subject I love and, equally important, a chance to connect with peers who share my passion for medieval and renaissance music,” Laura says. Ultimately she also looks to finish a masters degree in Musicology. Besides studying, Laura plans to continue to write for WFIU’s early music radio program Harmonia as well as the newly created web page at Early Music Radio, www.earlymusicradio.co.uk. Laura will be performing with the Ensemble Musical Offering in Milwaukee on December 3rd and 4th (see Music Coming Up below).

Recorder Playing Online

During business hours I have visited the YouTube web site, not to watch videos while I am supposed to be working (I minimized the browser), but to listen to music. I looked for pieces by Thomas Tallis or William Byrd or others and then edited marketing materials or wrote case studies surrounded by the melodies of the Renaissance. Mary McCutcheon, a board member for the American Recorder Society from Montreal, had a similar idea. She searched for “Recorder Lessons” on YouTube and found 818 videos; when looking for “Classical Music/recorder” or “Recorder medieval” she found more, including 10 Van Eyck pieces.

The Recorderdevoix Channel series offers works by Dario
Castello, and in a multi-screen series a one-man band named Kurthugoschneider laid down four recorder, drum and finger snaps that claimed nearly three million visitors. Michala Petri and the Chamber Orchestra of Hong Kong appear in the Vivaldi concerto and première the Recorder Concerto by Richard Harvey. Aldo Abreu demonstrates 18th century Von Heune Collection recorders and plays Italian Baroque trios. Marion Verbruggen appears in a video at the Amherst Early Music Festival.

Mary also notes that you can find music and dance instructional videos on MonkeySee.com, where you can search for “Vicki Boeckman” to find her video “How to Play Songs on the Recorder.” The magazine Windkanal (www/windkanal.de) offers articles "YouTube & Blockflöte" in archival issues 3 and 4 from 2010. Finally the American Recorder Society web site has its own links. Look under Publications/Publications & Media for a concert by Pete Rose and a video of children discovering the instrument through John Tyson's "Recorder Power." And the Resources/Instructional Videos tab links up to Boeckman's "How to Play Songs" capsules.—many thanks to Mary McCutcheon

Early Music Radio

Here’s another Internet discovery for Renaissance music fans—www.earlymusicradio.co.uk. This online radio station offers webcasts of great music 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. Open the web page, click the link Listen to Early Music, and wonderful melodies just start pouring out of your computer speakers automatically.

The web site also offers YouTube videos, concert reviews, links to other sites of interest, information about new releases, and information about the Lyrichord label and podcasts. The page is rather cryptic at points, and it provides little information about the music as it is streaming. But you can click the link on the top of the Listen to Early Music Radio page, type a few keywords in the Amazon search tool that appears, and the Amazon web page opens with plenty of detailed information about the recording you are interested in. The site supports all of the standard online music players.
